Suffers Knife Early Sunday

Joseph E. Barnhill, 51, Marshall, is in fair condition at Bothwell as a result of a slash wound suffered in a fight in front of 119 North Broadway early Sunday

The incident occurred about 4:35 a.m. when Barnhill and his farm employee William Aaron McDaniel, 45, of Route 1, Houstonia, engaged in an argument.

According to the police who questioned McDaniel, McDaniel accused Barnhill of arguing with him and threatening to beat him up. The officers quoted McDaniel as saying: "He started at me and I pulled my knife, sidestepped him and hit him with the knife."

The wound began about the center of the abdomen and went around the left side.

Barnhill was rushed to the Bothwell Hospital where Dr. A. J Campbell and Dr. John Lamy performed a major operation. It was necessary to take numerous stitches to close the wound.

Sunday afternoon Harold E Barrick, prosecuting attorney filed felonious assault charges against McDaniel and he was taken from the city jail and later lodged in the Pettis County jail. FARMERS FIND LIMESTONE PAYS. Graph shows how Missouri farmers have increased their use of agricultural limestone during past five years. Extension soils specialists at the University of Missouri say a desirable goal this year is 2,750,000 tons—up 20 percent from last year. Extension specialists expect the amount of limestone used to keep climbing as more and more producers realize it is needed for low cost crop production. Surveys show at least one-half of Missouri's crop land needs limestone now for top crop results. Then periodic limestone treatments will be needed to maintain top yields.

Mr. Shrum will be minister of the First Christian Church. The Shrum family came to Knob Noster in April, 1958, after Mr. Shrum graduated from Ozark Bible College in Joplin with an AB degree. The church at Knob Noster averaged 111 in attendance when he arrived and 138 the past year. During his ministry an outside bulletin board was installed, 96 folding chairs were purchased, and a mimeograph and type writer, and new choir robes and a closet to store them were acquired. Two kindergarten tables and a new public address system have been purchased or obtained as a class project. Two classes 1960 are now supporting mission fields. INC.

For the second consecutive Independence Day, Americans pay their respects to a brandnew Old Glory, this one with an even 50 sparkling stars. The national emblem has come a long way since Congress authorized the first one in 1777 and decreed the field of 13 stars to represent "a new constellation."

Our American flag is unique among the world's in that it has changed and grown even as the country it represents has grown. The field of stars has been revised many times, and may possibly be again. But the familiar 13 red and white stripes are enduring and will always serve to remind us of our humble beginning as a nation.

One of the earliest American flags to display those stripes was the Great Union or Grand Union flag, which was first used by troops at Prospect Hill during the siege of Boston in January, 1776. That flag bore the British Union Jack in its corner, perhaps indicative of the ties that still bound the colonies of England.

In 1794, the number of stripes was increased to 15 with the admission of Vermont and Kentucky to the young republic. Then in 1818 the number was permanently set at 13 for reasons of practicality but also by way , of symbolizing the original 13 states.

According to legend, George Washington described the flag in these words: "We take the star from heaven, the red from our mother country, separating it by white stripes, thus showing that we have separated from her, and the white stripes shall go down to posterity representing liberty."

Whether or not it is merely a legend, it speaks volumes about our heritage. For we, today, are that posterity, and it is we, today, who are determining what our posterity will inherit from us.

Yes, our flag has been a changing flag, yet it has always been the same in what it symbolized to each generation. It has been a proud flag and will be such, as long as those who salute it are worthy of it.

Ike Is Sore At Douglas MacArthur II

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON-President Eisenhower has come back from the Far East so furious over the bad judgment and faulty reporting of Ambassador Douglas MacArthur II, nephew of the general, that the ambassador may be

The President blames bad advice from Mac-Arthur for the humiliation of being disinvited to Tokyo. He feels that he should not have been led into this kind of impasse-especially because he personally was not anxious to go to Japan after his trip to Russia had been Whether or not Ike will carry through with his idea that MacArthur should be transferred remains to be seen. State Department career diplomats operate a closed shop just as tight as that of John L. Lewis in his mining heyday. And unless direct orders come from the White House, the State Department will argue that it must save face for MacArthur and he will stay on.

Inside Story Meanwhile more details of the ill-fated Far Eastern trip have leaked out and it's possible to reveal much of what happened behind the

One reason for the snafus was faulty communications-at times no communications at all. During the 16 hours en route between Anchorage, Alaska, and Clark Field in the Philippines, the President was given not one single message. His plane carried all kinds of electronic equipment for receiving messages, but no word about the increased rioting in Tokyo reached him.

This, it should be noted, is not unusual. White House aides don't like to bother the President with unpleasant news. On trips he relaxes, reads westerns, plays bridge.

Prior to Ike's departure, Ambassador Mac-Arthur had sent several reports that the President's trip to Japan was necessary in order to save democracy in Japan; that failure to come would end Kishi's middle-of-the-road government - let extremists walk in. This save-democracy mission appealed to the Pres-

Meanwhile MacArthur had been telling the Secret Service representative in Tokyo that student riots made no difference; that he, MacArthur, understood the Japanese people and they would respect the person of the President. The Secret Service, though worried, took the ambassador at his word.

But Secret Service chief U. E. Baughman, who had arrived in Manila, was even more worried. He became so concerned that he permitted himself to be quoted in Manila that he was greatly worried about the trip to Japan

However, on June 16, the very same day the Tokyo mob stormed parliament, killing one and wounding 500, Ambassador MacArthur sent another cable on the importance of having the President come to Japan.

Didn't Learn of Riots How woefully uninformed was the State Department is illustrated by a breakfast given

RE-APPRAISAL-The Summit fiasco has created a new situation for the U.S.A. and calls for an immediate re-appraisal by Mr. Eisenhower of his Foreign Aid program.

No longer can he count on the sure help of a dozen countries in any new showdown with the Soviets. Khrushchev has blackmailed Pakistan and Norway into prohibiting us from using their bases. Turkey will not grant permission to use her bases. Afghanistan has protested any flights over her territory.

Ceylon, Ecuador and Tunisia criticized us in the recent U.N. debate. Norway and Denmark, although NATO members, will not tolerate U.S. troops on their soil.

Greece, Belgium and the Netherlands have refused our IRBMs, even as gifts. Morocco has demanded that we evacuate four huge air bases, costing more than one billion $'s. France, last year, forced us to remove all our fighter bombers from her soil. Nor can we use our bases in Great Britain without Macmillan's approval.

It seems plain that most of our "allies" are getting into a position to declare themselves neutral in any big showdown with in Manila on the morning of June 17 by Ambassador Carlos Romulo. At 9:30 the night before, the press associations carried the news of the 20,000 rioters who stormed the Japanese Diet. But 11 hours later, at breakfast, J. Graham Parsons, assistant secretary of state for the Far East, did not know about these Later that day, Walter Winchell stood outside the Manila hotel telling newsmen that it was all off, Ike would not go to Tokyo.

"You take care of your business and I'll take care of mine," Jim Hagerty told Winchell. "The President is going to Tokyo."

But Hagerty was enough concerned to have a special phone installed on the reviewing stand where the President spoke, and over this phone later came word from Premier Kishi that the trip was off.

About 24 hours later, as the President steamed toward Formosa, he held an informal press conference aboard ship.

"I would like to know," he mused, "what the world-wide reaction is."

Newspapers all over the world had published reaction to cancellation of the Tokyo trip. Senate leaders and others had given their reaction. But either the State Department had not informed the President, or his aides, who always shield him, had withheld the

Brains Profitable

The 1960 June graduates have been lucky. The "Help Wanted" sign was a welcome sign, indeed, when the campus was left for the wide wide world.

U.S. government studies indicated that most college graduates should have located jobs in their chosen fields.

Bachelor degrees are worth, on the average, a starting salary of $450 per month.

Engineers get $525 per month, with more pay if they have had advanced study beyond a bachelor's degree.

Accountants receive up to $475 per month; sales representatives $435; chemists $435 with a bachelor's degree and up to $700 for a

Physicists and mathematicians are slightly above the scale for chemists; business trainees $425: teachers from $4,100 to $4,200 annually; federal government $412 for a bachelor's degree and up to $735 per month for a Ph.D.

This year's college graduating class was one of the largest in history and it speaks well for the economy that it is willing to pay for brains.

Even the high school employment picture looks good. It is estimated that of the 725,000 who enter the labor force 90 per cent of them will find jobs within two or three months after graduation.

TACOMA NEWS - TRIBUNE: Castro, An Empty Man .- A year and a half ago, when Fidel Castro was putting the finishing touches to his fight with Batista in the hills. Castro's infectious romantic idealism captivated many liberal idealists in America and other places. Dr. Fidel Castro, they called him, and it seemed fitting, for he was thought of as a philosopher of revolution.

How that picture of the revolutionist has changed. The aura of romanticism is stripped away. Castro is revealed as a weak, floundering, ineffectual man, totally incapable of governing. Unhappy at his desk, yearning still for the smell of revolution, Castro has made the television studio his citadel. Here, in three and four-hour sittings before the camera, he shouts against America in an effort to hide his total incapacity.

Castro is supposed to have been something of a genuine student of government and revolution. He seems to have remembered all the wrong things. When he should have fastened in mind the true character of Americaa freedom and the sympathy of Americans everywhere, he remembered instead the old totalitarian lessons: when you're having trouble at home, make constant charges that foreign plotters seek to undermine you. Since he cannot master the arts of governing, he has no choice but to practice the arts of deceit to cloak his inadequacy from the Cuban

"We need a peck of seed potatoes." the man told his wife as he finished spading his garden, but when she started to buy them that seemed such a small amount that she bought two pecks. She took them home and they cut them up, then began planting

With them was their little saw that she was taking part in the potato planting too. She was taking the potatoes out of the holes and planting them herself. She just didn't see any sense in planting them in rows or in one particular spaded up spot in the yard, she just planted them everywhere. Her favorite place was the compost heap, and as summer came on and the potatoes sprouted she really had a nice lot of potatoes in the compost heap, which they dag for her and she ate, for potatoes are one of her favorite foods, raw or cooked, she doesn't care. And these were extra good, her own potatoes she had planted

This year the woman was picking strawberries and delighted the little dog bounced over to the strawberry patch. "Nice red strawberries to bury," she thought, but the woman had a different idea. She stopped her right in the beginning. "People are funny," the little dog thinks, her mistress is just jealous because she had a green-a green-well -a green paw."

Don't Let Your 'Discovery' Flip You Into Cancer Panic

One of my favorite Gilbert and Sullivan songs is the one that ends with the line:

The Doctor's Mailbag

"So it really doesn't matter, matter, matter, matter.

Unfortunately, some of the things that really do not matter to me are a source for great concern to at least four of my correspondents whose fears I hope to put at ease today.

The first of these is a middleaged woman who "rubbed the tip of my tongue over the roof of my mouth and discovered a hard They didn't pay much swelling" that she feared might be cancerous.

Although I think you'd better show this to your doctor, dear lady, it's a 100-to-1 shot that you've discovered a ridge of bone that's always been there and that's perfectly normal.

Perhaps your attention was directed to it when you singed it with a hot liquid or scraped it with some rough food. Anyway, it not only doesn't elderly man who "discovered a hard lump in the middle of my stomach where the lower ribs come together." This too is a normal structure. It's called the xiphoid cartilage.

The word means it's shaped like a sword, though I must say I've never seen a sword like it. Anyway, it doesn't really matter and I'll guarantee, sight unseen, it'll never become malignant.

Cling to Girlish Qualities; Hold Your Husband's Love

one of the finest compliments a man can pay a woman. After her death he said of her:

"She was slender and beautiful and girlish - and she was both girl and woman. She remained both girl and woman to the last day of her life.

It is the ability to be both girl and woman at the same time that enables a wife to keep a husband in love with her through the And yet all too many wives lose the quality of girlishness as soon as they settle down to being homemakers, mothers and pillars of the community What are the qualities a man considers "girlish" and hopes his wife will never lose? One is the sense of fun that brings forth laughter and gaiety and a happy-hearted attitude toward living. It's what keeps a woman from becoming grim. Another "girlish" quality is enthusiasm - the ability to get excited over small pleasures. This kind of youthful enthusiasm not only brightens the world for the woman who has it but for her family as well.

Still another of the girlish qualities is the kind of femininity that enjoys leaning just a little on a man's strength and prevents a of attitude.

It is a shame for a woman to ever lose her girlishness - even if she lives to be a very old lady. For girlishness gives a woman sparkle, a warmth and gaiety that make men comfortable and happy. And you can see women of 30 who still have a girlish quality. And you can see women of 30 who have completely lost it. Girlishness isn't a matter of age - but

Mellow Illinois Senator Says Its Time to Get Tough

By ROBERT E. HENNESSEE Of Our Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON-They are asking on Capitol Hill: "What has happened to Everett Dirksen?"

The Illinois Republican senator, who a year ago said privately that he was a "happy man" because "I have found peace within myself," appears to have mislaid his lovely concinnity.

Everett Dirksen "ripened" after the McCarthy era, and, as his party's leader in the Senate since early last year, he "mellowed" and became one of the best-liked men in the chamber. But some recent remarks, which

Walter Lippmann called "nasty," have led one of Dirksen's colleagues to suggest that he has entered the next stage in the life Dirksen, certainly one of the most witty and talented orators of his time, rather directly placed the blame for the collapse of the Paris Summit Conference, not on the U-2 affair, and not on Khrushchev but rather on Adlai Stevenson, who was home in Illinois. Dirksen based his deduction on a Paris newspaper story in which Stevenson was quoted as being agreeable to making certain concessions to the Russians. Steven: son denied he made any such statements, but to no avail.

Dirksen insists that "I cannot alter facts," meaning that Stevenson is lying and a Paris news-

Dirksen has kept plugging away on this issue and the Democratic leaders, including, somewhat belatedly, Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson tell Dirksen he is being "unjust and unfair" to Stevenson.

Dirksen also insists that Senator John F. Kennedy "wants" the U.S. to apologize to Khrushchev. which Kennedy denies but to no

Dirksen's latest efforts in this regard was a veiled allegation that Stevenson and Kennedy were somehow connected with the humiliation suffered by the U.S. when the President's visit to Japan was canceled. He said:

"All of this now seems crystal clear as part of a pattern.

"Though I do not particularly like to add this as an afterthought. there are some who recently thought perhaps it was an appropriate idea for the President of the United States to apologize to Khrushchev. There are some whose views have appeared in the various newspapers who believe that we should have made concessions to Khrushchev. If this lesson now is lost to them, then frankly I am about to give up.'

Dirksen does not laugh and joke as much as he did a few weeks back. The Summit collapse and the Far Eastern failures of recent days have cost him his aplomb. Rarely now does he tell one of his colleagues how much he loves him, but instead he says:

"The time has come for some tough talking in America and for a tough campaign. . . I do not intend to mince any words. . .

It's just not the season to be

Beating Children Produces Fear of Human Contact

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence

The T's have become increasingly aware of the severity and frequency of the spankings Mr. T's sister gives her children. The oldest one - a girl of 8 - is the special target of this discipline. Mrs. T. writes: "Though we don't know why these beatings are bad for the children emotionally, we feel that they are and want to know what we can do about the situation. . .'

You can refer it to your local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children which will hold your complaint in confidence. As to the badness of beating children severely and frequently, it can be simply stated. It creates deep and lasting fear of human This should not be hard to un-

To be so used as a "thing." as an instrument for the release of another person's passion is to develop terror of any human contact.

Children with histories of severe corporal punishment suffer not only from sexual maladjustments but from suspicion of all relationship.

Because children's bodies belong to them, beating the bodies is biologically crazy. It violates the natural independence of their bodies which chew food, digest it, breathe and move about without connection to parents.

When we beat a child severely and frequently, we destroy the security of this independence. We leave him with the conviction that anyone who approaches him may abuse his body. So, to protect himself, he withdraws from people lest they seek contact with him. People who have been severely beaten as children may experi-

Women like to paint their faces-and men to joke about it. Hamlet's jibe has been getting laughs for centuries: "I have heard of your paintings too, well enough; God has given you one face, and you make yourselves another." Ancient Athenian comedy was even less gallant: "If you go out in summer, two streaks of black run from your eyes, perspiration makes a red furrow from your cheeks to your neck; and when your hair touches your face it is blanched with white lead."

Miss Ball, who recently divorced Arnaz, came to this seaside community to recuperate from injuries suffered in a fall on a movie set last Friday.

Sunday Arnaz was reported to have joined her at a beach house where they spent summer vacations for some 10 years. A reporter from nearby San Diego called at the home and was told by servants that Arnza was away at church. Miss Ball's secretary said the actress was in bed and under sedation.

Arnaz chatted with Miss Ball before she left a Hollywood hospital Saturday. Lucy said later they were "still the best of friends -but there was no talk of reconciliation."
